EXILES FLOCK BACK HAVANA

Havana, Jan. 2. Havana's international airport, closed to commercial traffic since yesterday afternoon, was operated by Fidel Castro's rebel soldiers today.

The only traffic at the big air. port, located nine miles south of Havana was planes bringing political exiles back to Cuba. The rebels sent out at least three empty airliners to the United States and Venezuela to icturn extles to Havana following the collapse of President Fulgencio Batista's Government yesterday.

The most prominent of the exiles brought back in this fushion was Dr Carlos Prio Socarras, former Cuban President, who was flown from Minmi. Florida, aboard a Cuban airlines plane under control of Castro's "26th of July" movement.

Meanwhile, lorryloads of Dr. Fidel Castro's rebel militia wearing red and black armbands rode through the streets of Havnna today as this strikebound city awaited the arrival of Dr Manuel Urrutla, Castro's presidential nominee, to take office. ATTRACTIVE CAREERS

DLANS to make careers in administration in the London County L Council's service more attractive include a proposal that the present administrative grade to which new staff are recrulted should be amalgamated with the next higher grade, to form a new grade with substantially improved starting salaries. For example, a new entrant joining at 21 would start at £550 instead of £445 a year; a new entrant of 23 would start at £625 instead of £557; and one of 25 at £700 instead of £630. For those joining on or before their 25th birthday, the salary scale for the new recruitment grade would provide annual increases ensuring £887 a year at 30, £1,000 at 33 and £1,090 at 35,

THE FAITHS BY WHICH WE LIVE: Part two

O British lowry is small in number, high in prestige and achievement in many fields. Its religious practices vary considerably — but a common factor is a deep, abiding sense of duty.

THERE is one devout and important religious community which will not be worshipping as the bells peal out tomorrow morning. I refer, of course, to the Jews, for whom the Sabbath is today.

How many are there in Britain? According to the latest official estimate no more than 450,000, of whom about 280,000 are concentrated in and around London, prisingly low considering that nearly 150,000 Jewish immigrants sought refuge in Britain in the black years after Hitler came to power in Germany

You might therefore expect to find the community growing at a tremendously fast pace, in has been only 60,000. Why so small? There are three main reasons.

During the last few months he has been increasingly referred to in contemptuous terms by those who in the days of his power would have thought themselves lucky to have a word with him. It has become the fashion to lay the whole blame of Suez upon his shoulders as if he was alone responsible for the calamity.

I myself have been dismayed at the attitude of some of my colleagues who now dismiss him without generosity or kindliness, yet who at the time of Suez were his most fervent supporters.

Let us remember

There are those who seem to take delight in dissociating themselves from all responsibility for an adventure in which they wholchcurted-

South's four-heart bld might also come in the assumed name category but his play left nothing to be desired.

East won the opening trump lead and shifted to the jack of spaces. South played the queen and West won with the acc. A spade return lost to South's king and he promptly led the suit back.

East won and led a fourth spade forgetting that when both sides play the same suit one is likely to be wrong.

South ruffed and ran out all his trumps but one. He discarded one club and three small diamonds from dummy and East and West each felt impelled to hang on to three clubs. Since they were left with only four cards each, neither had two diamonds left. South cashed dummy's two nces, ruffed a club and his deuce of diamonds won the last

Of course, either East or West could have held on to two diamonds and ruined South's play. It just happened that the swindle worked.

After a two-week break for the Christmas and New Year festivities, the cricket league resumes this fittingly enough at this the beginning of a new year with no fewer than four interesting first division matches.

Most of those in action today will have undoubtedly made at least one "cricket resolution" --- not to be out for a duck this year --- and I can visualise their grim and determined faces as they try to shake off at the crease the effects of the week's surfeit and carry out their resolution.

Not Recollections But Resolutions Should Be Policy For New Year

It is a new year. Convention has it that at such a time we should either look smugly back over what has happened in the old year or make ambitious resolutions which we hope will contribute something to the betterment of the new one.

The first pursuit is something of a luxury. It is true that it can be a pleasant luxury and even an entertaining pastime but this is surely the time when everyone in our sporting world should set about making positive resolutions if only as an expression of their determination to contribute something to the progress of the particular sport in which their interest lies.
